OMA is one of the 100 best companies to work for in Mexico

• Certification by the Great Place to Work® Institute Mexico

Monterrey, Mexico, May 9, 2011—OMA (NASDAQ: OMAB; BMV: OMA), the operator of 13 international airports in central and northern Mexico, was certified as a “Great Place to Work” in an award ceremony in Mexico City. OMA was granted this award for promoting policies and practices that improve the quality of life inside the organization, positioning the company as one of the 100 Best Companies to Work for in Mexico for the year 2011, in the segment of companies between 500 and 5,000 employees. OMA ended up in 85th place, and is the first Mexican airport group to achieve this distinction.

The Great Place to Work® Institute (GPTWI) bases its evaluation on the model created by Robert Levering, where confidence is the pillar for making a company a better place to work. GPTWI evaluates the relationships between employees and management, between employees and their work, and between employees and other co-workers, along five dimensions: credibility, respect, fairness, pride, and camaraderie.

The certification of OMA as “A Great Place to Work” was made after carrying out surveys with employees and an analysis of the company’s programs, practices, and policies for the administration and development of human capital.

Victor Bravo, the CEO of OMA, noted: “OMA is committed to the personal and professional development of our workforce. This certification by the Great Place to Work Institute Mexico is recognition of everyone’s daily effort to make OMA a great place to work.”
